GENERAL NEWS.

THE BURLINGTON ROAD JOINS THE COLORADO POOL.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 15.—Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, who, for several months past has been making her home with her sister, Mrs. Edwards, is reported to be failing rapidly in health during the last few weeks. In addition to her other ailments, she is greatly troubled by numerous large boils, which come [illegible]. She is at present confined to her bed, but soon intends, if her health will permit, to go to Ocean Grove, New Long Branch, where she hopes to be benefited by the baths.

Mrs. Lincoln Dead.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 16.—Mrs. Lincoln, widow of late President Lincoln, died in this city at 8:15 to-night. She had been ill for a long time, but a few days ago [illegible] with a constant [illegible] died. Robert Lincoln left Washington to-night, and will be here Tuesday morning. The funeral announcement will be later.

The immediate cause of Mrs. Lincoln's death was apoplectic paralysis. The last words she was heard to utter were spoken last evening at 10 o'clock, when she looked to her [illegible] Mr. Edwards, and said: "I am going." From that time until death she was unconscious. Mrs. Mary Lincoln was born Dec. 13, 1818, in Lexington, Ky., daughter of R. S. and Elizabeth P. Todd, came to Springfield in 1839, and married Abraham Lincoln Nov. 4, 1842. Her only living child is Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, secretary of war.

A Colorado Pool Arranged.

CHICAGO, July 16.—The Times has the following: The Colorado pool became an accomplished fact to-day. Potter of the Burlington road, Wheeler of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, and Clark, of the Union Pacific, agreed upon the basis conditions of pooling arrangements and dividing the Denver traffic in this way: Union Pacific, 51 per cent.; Burlington, 9; Atchison, 19. The percentage to the Union Pacific is for the [illegible] Denver [illegible] from Omaha and Kansas. The smallness of the Atchison allotment is due to its having a [illegible] Denver [illegible] trade of the Denver & Rio Grande. The Burlington, besides receiving 20 per cent. for its Denver line, receives on its [illegible] considerable proportion of the percentage allotted to the Union Pacific and Atchison roads, swelling its total share of Colorado business to at least 30 per cent. of the whole. Probably the Denver & Rio Grande has been [illegible] to the smallest portion of the percentage accepted by the [illegible] Company. [illegible] its portion of the share of the through rates. It is understood [illegible] may, upon [illegible] notice, withdraw from the pool. Each company reserves the privilege of presenting a claim for increase of percentage of the traffic. The agreement agreed upon provides for maintenance of an agreed schedule of rates. Gross freight of all lines is to be pooled. Some minor conditions are yet to be agreed on. This would put a quietus to all speculation as to the chances of a war of rates between the great trunk lines west of the Missouri river.

Independent Convention Called.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—Chairman McKee, of the independent republican state committee, issued a call for a meeting of that body in this city on the 27th instant, to consider the [illegible] propositions submitted by the regular republican committee, and while independent candidates, speaking for themselves alone, have rejected it, and independents of this city say the committee doubtless reject the propositions, and probably refuse to [illegible] to any arrangement of candidates. Stewart, Duff, Merrick and [illegible] are to have a [illegible] convention, [illegible] the present candidates on either ticket will be eligible for renomination.

Senator Cameron has decided he would make no more overtures to independents. In conversation with leading Pennsylvanians yesterday he announced his programme for the rest of the campaign. The stalwarts in Pennsylvania will make an aggressive fight. They will consider the independents as much their enemies, if not more so than democrats, and no concessions of any sort will be given. Senator Cameron said it would be better to make a straight-out fight with certainty of defeat than patch up some sort of a compromise and then be beaten.

A Mysterious Murder.

SIDNEY, Neb., July 15.—A cowboy, while riding in the foothills, near old Julesburg, to-day, discovered the decomposed body of a man. From all appearances he must have been dead several weeks. Alongside of him was found a revolver with a cartridge in it. The body also contained two gunshot holes. A deep mystery surrounds the affair. Coroner Oarley left here this evening for the scene to hold an inquest. The man was about 5 ft. 4 in., wore dark clothes, and had blonde mustache and hair. Excitement is intense here.

The Texarkana Disaster.

TEXARKANA, July 15.—Nine more bodies have been recovered from the ruins, most all burnt beyond recognition. Twenty bodies buried yesterday. Business houses are all closed, and citizens generally attended the funeral. Up to date 28 bodies have been recovered, and it's supposed a dozen others are in the ruins. Several of those missing are supposed to be among the unrecognizable dead. Contracts have been let for removing debris preparatory to rebuilding.

A [illegible] Shot.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Times' Laredo: At 7 o'clock this evening W. E. Cummings, district attorney, was shot dead by Leonard Haynes, son of the customs collector at Brownsville, for seduction of his sister, thirteen years old. Haynes ran toward the Rio Grande river, pursued by police, but his brother stopped them with a drawn revolver and the murderer escaped into Mexico.

[illegible] in the Black Hills.

BISMARCK, D. T., July 15.—News is received that a terrific storm of wind, rain and hail has swept the fertile and populous sections of Black Hills, known as Spearfish and Redwater, and 2,000 acres of magnificent grain nearly ready for harvest, were destroyed, and a section of country four miles wide and thirty long was devastated. No loss of life reported, but some may be expected.

Killed by a Fall.

BISMARCK, D. T., July 15.—Two men quarreled on a bridge trestle, on the Mandan side, last evening. Their names are Wm. Watson and Peter Stuart, both formerly of Michigan. They clinched, and in their rage fell to the ground, 35 feet, and were both killed. A dispute as to which was responsible for falling off a piece of timber was the cause.

Advice from Saloon Keepers.

CINCINNATI, July 15.—Saloon keepers believing the Sunday liquor law a dead letter on account of recent police court proceedings, advise that in view of the feelings of a large class of citizens, saloons keep their doors closed and conduct business quietly on Sundays.

A Contemptuous Council.

DENVER, July 15.—The Republican's Leadville special says: The mayor and city council were arrested to-day and fined $150 each, and ten days in jail for contempt of court. The police judge and city attorney were removed and new men appointed in their place.

An [illegible] Dispute.

DANIELS BLUFF, Ark., July 15.—Washington Williams, disgusted at Charles Savage for voting the democratic ticket, assaulted him in a barber shop to-day and was shot dead by Savage. Both were colored.

Davitt Has Gone.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Michael Davitt sailed for Antwerp yesterday. His friends saw him off, and gave him a purse. He goes to Paris, then to London, and then to Dublin to attend the convention next month.

A Generous Senator.

ATLANTA, July 15.—Senator Brown gives $50,000 to the university at Athens, Ga., the interest to be used in educating poor young men.

CANADA.

An Extensive Tea Seizure.

MONTREAL, July 15.—The most extensive seizure ever made here for years by the customs took place yesterday. It amounts to between $45,000 and $50,000. For some time past officials of this port have had their suspicions aroused that New York tea brokers were engaged in making false entries of tea in order to cheat government out of ten per cent. duty. A sharp lookout was kept and it fell to the lot of Deputy Collector O'Hara to attach a consignment transmitted through the Merchant's Forwarding company by Dudley, Hall & Co. of New York to Kirk, Lockery & Co., wholesale merchants of this city. When the present tariff was imposed the duty on tea imported direct from the country where grown was entirely abolished, but in order to encourage direct trade with those countries a differential duty of 10 per cent. was placed upon all indirect shipments. There is no doubt the law has been evaded to a great extent by New Yorkers. The direct trade with China and Japan not having developed to the extent anticipated, is evidence forthcoming to the effect that tea now held under seizure was taken out of store in New York. The affair has caused a sensation among the trade here although it has not got into the local press yet.

The Suspected Murderers.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Times London, Ontario special: The two men O'Flaherty, arrested in county Kerry, Ireland, on suspicion of being implicated in the Phoenix park murder, belong one to this city and one to Chicago. The first is Matthew O'Flaherty, proprietor of the Wellington House, and his brother Cornelius O'Flaherty was engineer on the Chicago and Northwestern railway. They are innocent of the crime, as a Free Press reporter talked with Matthew here on May 31st, a [illegible] after the murder was committed. They sailed from New York on the 3d of June, on the steamer Celtic. Mayor Meredith, of this city, wired the [illegible] in Ireland. Their trip to Ireland was taken with a view to benefiting the health of Matthew, who is ill.

Fine Imposed on the Pullman Company.

MONTREAL, July 16.—It has leaked out that the government has imposed a very heavy fine on the Pullman car company, as a result of the investigation of the customs commissioner here, in relation to bringing in large supplies into Canada without paying duties.

LONDON LETTERS.

The Action of England at Alexandria Censured Severely—John Bright Resigns because of what he Considers an Outrageous Act of Hostility.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

NEW YORK, July 16.—The World's London: The exciting and unlooked for events of the past week have greatly shocked all moderate men throughout the country, by whom it is felt that the argument that it was necessary for Seymour to defend the British fleet from the guns of Arabi's batteries offers no adequate justification of the ministry, since the British fleet never ought to have gone there. For once the radical element of the party in power joins with conservative opposition in condemning the infatuated policy which has brought about the destruction of Alexandria, and the massacre of so many hundreds of Europeans and Christians. On the 19th of May the English government demanded the expulsion of Arabi from Egypt, and this provoked the massacre of the 11th of June, and made Arabi the hero of the Alexandrian populace. It was inevitably certain he would take measures to protect himself. It ought to have been foreseen that a bombardment which could not be successfully resisted would be followed by the desperate endeavor to do as much mischief as possible.

In about ten days the Nile will begin its annual rise, and there is but too much reason to believe that with the present chaos reigning in Egypt none of the usual arrangements to control its volume have been or will be taken. Thus with a great overflow, such as would inevitably issue under such circumstances, the cotton and grain country would be certainly drowned out, and this practical warning has caused great perturbation in ministerial circles. In fact Egypt is for the time on Gladstone's hands.

All eyes are now turned to Cairo and the Suez canal. Meetings of liberals are rapidly being called on every hand, in defiance of Chamberlain's caucuses, to protest against the iniquitous policy of the government in the Orient, and it is impossible not to perceive that these events must have a most important influence on American commerce. The supply of Egyptian cotton and grain must, under the most favorable circumstances, be much smaller than usual, causing great additional demands upon farmers and planters.

Crop prospects here continue decidedly gloomy, the weather having again been rainy and unseasonable in many parts. Wheat is completely beaten so that not half a crop can be hoped for, while a splendid crop is lying rotting upon the ground.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Tribune's London: In conversation with Bright about his reported resignation, he said the true cause of it was the Egyptian policy of the government, culminating in what Mr. Bright considers an unjustifiable use of force in Alexandria. He was opposed to sending the fleet to Egypt originally for any political purpose. He contended that England had no business to interfere with the internal affairs of Egypt, having no serious interest there except in the Suez canal and the canal was never menaced by Arabi or any body else. He believed that the massacre on the 11th of June, was largely provoked by the presence of the English fleet. He regards the continued presence of the fleet with constantly increasing number of foreign men-of-war in a friendly harbor, as in itself a menace and unfriendly act. The motive of sending them, namely, the protection of English subjects, was a good motive, but matters were so managed that the fleet became a source of danger rather than a protection. When asked what the [illegible] should have done after Admiral Seymour had delivered the ultimatum and Arabi promised to discontinue armaments and then broke this promise, he answered that we have yet heard but one side of the story, and he seemed inclined to discredit the report that the electric light showed that the troops were continuing work. He insisted, however, that these details were comparatively unimportant. The real cause of his resignation was the use of force which was not defensible on moral grounds. "For forty years," said Bright, "I have told my countrymen that morals were the true basis of politics. I have denounced war. I should have been false to my principles had I become a party to a war which was begun without necessity."

He proceeded to express his profound regret at parting from his colleagues and his chief—at taking the step which, he said, must seriously harm the ministry and perhaps, will divide the liberal party. He deplored it, but to abandon his principles he could not, from any regard to the party or any affection for persons.

Bright's extreme reluctance to sever himself from the government was even more strongly shown by his delay in taking the final step. He was present at the cabinet council so late as Thursday, three days after the hostilities began. His formal resignation was offered only yesterday. Even this afternoon some journals express doubts about its truth.

Sir Charles Dilke, in answering a question in the house with characteristic caution, said that there might be some ground for the report. The long conversation above briefly given might be condensed into a single phrase: Bright resigns from sheer abhorrence of war. How wide the divergence is between him and the rest of the world, may be judged from his declaration that the only war which was justifiable since the time of William III, was the suppression of the rebellion by the northern states. Bright's own friends feel, says the Pall Mall Gazette, that it is hard to find any reason for his retiring now which did not exist last May, when the cabinet approved the menacing note and dispatched the fleet to back up the menace, but no liberal is disposed to judge Bright in a critical spirit. Before his resignation the liberal party was practically united in sustaining the government.

The true course would have been to carry away such English subjects as wished to depart, and then to leave the khedive and Arabi Pasha to settle their own disputes. The sultan, as the sovereign, might properly have interfered. Bright admits that the restoration of Turkish authority in Egypt would have been a misfortune; but the English would not have been responsible, and Europe could then have required adequate guarantees for the departure of the Turks when order was restored. He also admits that English intervention would have been beneficial to Egypt, but he repeats that England has no business there. When asked to fix the points where his mind parted company with the minds of his colleagues, he replied that, though unable to approve the general course pursued with reference to Egypt, he always hoped they would stop short of the employment of force. He ridiculed the notion that the fleet was seriously menaced by the forts and dwelt strongly on the statement of the Standard correspondent and one other, that before the bombardment began, and after the expiration of the time fixed by Admiral Seymour, the Egyptian authorities offered to dismantle the forts. He was not aware that the statement was officially confirmed, but should it prove true, he thought the beginning of hostilities after such an offer was deserving of the strongest censure. Whether this report was true or not, he was unable to continue as a member of a government sanctioning bombardments.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Reasons for General Howard's Transfer from West Point.

CONGRESS RECEIVES A HINT CONCERNING AN ISTHMUS CANAL.

Amount of the Pension Bill Allowance—Recent Nominations—General Political and Personal News from the Capital.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

CHICAGO, July 16.—Special from Washington: The transfer of Gen. Howard from command at West Point to the Department of the Platte, has been a good deal commented upon here in army circles. The occasion for transfer, however, seems to be in fact that affairs in Arizona have been in a very bad condition the past year, and the department has come to the conclusion to make an improvement. Secretary Lincoln said to-day that he was determined to stop Apache raids and disorders in that territory, and sent an experienced and energetic officer to do the duty. In looking around for such an officer it was found that General Howard was the only one available. His first intention was to send him to Arizona, but upon consideration it was thought best to order General Crook and let General Howard take Crook's place in command of the department of the Platte, with headquarters at Omaha. The changes would not have been made, but for the condition of affairs in Arizona, and General Howard's transfer to the department of the Platte was absolutely necessary after it had been decided to send Crook to Arizona, he being the only officer of high rank available. Secretary Lincoln said it would be necessary to make a change in the command of cadets at West Point, as Major Lazelle, the present commandant, has just been promoted to be lieutenant-colonel, and as the colonel of his regiment was unfit for duty, it would be necessary for Lieutenant-colonel Lazelle, the next ranking officer, to take command.

JACOB S. TABER, President.

The tobacco association will try to get the tax on tobacco reduced to 8 cents, cigars to $3½ dollars, and cigarettes 50 cents.

The republican caucus committee on order of business, did not meet again to-day as was contemplated, Robeson being absent. It is generally understood, however, the South Carolina contested election case of Small against Tillman, will be taken up Tuesday, providing a quorum of republican and independent members is present. Sergeant-at-Arms Hooker says he has assurance there will be 147 republican, greenback and independent members in their seats, when the house assembles Tuesday next.

It is said discussion of the jury with regard to evidence relied upon by prosecution to connect Senator Kellogg with the alleged conspiracy, was made yesterday, and was unanimous. Bonds have been given in the sum of $4000 in case of the British steamer Cairnsmuir, held in custody of Marshal Drew for an infraction of the law regulating passenger berths, and the vessel released from libel. Four British steamers, the Anjer Head, Serapis, Strathairly and Cairnsmuir, at present in this port are libeled in various amounts for irregular construction of berths. Attorneys for defendants will make their defense principally on the ground that the term "vessel" as stated in the statutes is only applicable to sailing vessels, and not to steamships. The same point has already been raised at Portland in case of the Devonshire. District-attorney VanDuzen stated, yesterday, that before revision of the statutes the term "vessel" was held to apply to both steamships and sailing vessels, and convictions were had thereunder at New York. Since the enactment of the revised statutes the point has not been raised, and will therefore be a new issue which the courts will have to decide.

Anti-Debris Convention.

SACRAMENTO, July 15.—To-day the executive committee of the anti-debris association met in this city. Reports of J. O. Pierson and L. F. Bassett, surveyors, were received, read and ordered placed on file. The reports were relative to hydraulic mines that dumped into the north fork of the American river; also to mines in other sections that had been operated during the past season. The reports showed that hydraulic mining during the past season had been largely suspended all along the line, and that the general inclination was to turn their hydraulic into drift mines. It was moved and carried that a call be issued for a convention of 205 delegates, to be held in Sacramento on the 28th of September. Delegates to be apportioned as follows: Sacramento 25, San Joaquin 25, Yuba 25, Yolo 25, Butte 25, Sutter 25, Colusa 10, Solano 10, Tehama 10, and certain districts in Placer 10. Senate proceeded to consideration of the pension appropriation bill, the internal revenue bill having been laid aside informally on a point of order raised by Plumb.

Committee amendment directing the secretary of the interior to annually transmit to congress a list of all pensions borne on the rolls was struck from the bill.

Beck offered an amendment requiring the commissioner of pensions once each year to cause a list of all pensioners and applicants for pensions for each county in the United States to be made out and published in at least one newspaper in each county.

Amendment was finally ruled out on point of order. The bill then passed.

Anthony introduced a bill repealing so much of the army bill as retires Sherman and Sheridan; referred.

On motion of McMillan senate insisted upon its amendments to the River and Harbor appropriation bill, and a special committee was ordered consisting of Senators McMillan, Jones of Nevada, and Robinson.

Senate at 4:50 adjourned till Monday.

House.

Connor, from the committee of conference on the legislative appropriation bill, reported a disagreement.

After discussion house voted to insist on disagreement with senate and ask for further conference. Cannon, Hiscock and Robeson were appointed a committee on the legislative bill, and Hiscock, Robeson and Cox on the deficiency bill. The question on equality of salaries of senate and house employes referred to a civil service reform committee, provided no salaries should be increased.

House went into committee on senate amendments to the River and Harbor bill. The first seventeen amendments were nonconcurred in.

The Hennepin canal amendment gave rise to a discussion, which was nonconcurred in. The remainder of amendments were also nonconcurred in in gross, the whole number being 160.

The committee then rose and house nonconcurred in all senate amendments and adjourned.

CARE OF THE INSANE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

A visit to the new hospital for the insane at Salem, shows it to be well advanced towards completion, and that it bids fair to be a building in which the citizens of Oregon can take a just pride. Situated as it is on a delightful site, just far enough from the town and overlooking a wide stretch of the finest parts of that incomparable valley of the Willamette, as a visitor, I was charmed by the location. Stretching away in all directions for miles the eye rests on a scene which varies from almost every window and this is only bounded by the far distant hills, some of them snow capped, some grain covered, and all showing the varying shades of the deciduous and coniferous greens. But few, if any of the hospitals in the United States, have finer sites. One feature of the place is the unsurpassed natural slope of the grounds in front, as they sweep with easy grade for nearly a half mile towards the city, and the old oaks sprinkled over that space, give them a finished look, as if ready for occupancy and inviting to rest and shade the weary patients so soon to find their homes among them. The building itself is grand in its proportions, but while without architectural adornment, is plain, substantial and not unattractive. In its interior the arrangement of the wards and executive departments, show a wise consideration for the needs of the work and painstaking execution of details. Liberal provision is made for light and air, and it can be said that there are no dark rooms or corners, but from each parlor or sleeping room there is a pleasant and cheerful view. Especially cheerful are the day rooms, or parlors, and each patient, if the building be not crowded beyond its normal capacity of 400, will have an abundance of air space both night and day. The arrangement of the lavatories and baths, are particularly commendable, and they can be readily isolated from the ward proper, a thing always desirable, in a hospital, or in fact, any building. All the piping seems well trapped, and ventilated above the roof in an approved manner. In many hospitals the elaborate accommodations for the officers have been a just cause of complaint, but this is not so here, all seems comfortable, but plain and modest in extent. The arrangements for distributing the food are such that it can be promptly done, and the patients receive it while warm from the kitchen. More protection from fire could have been secured with more outlay, and the use of less inflammable material than wood in staircases and many parts of the building, and still there are stand pipes for hose attachments in each ward. A large experience in hospitals leads me to say that I believe the work to have been conscientiously and economically done, and much credit is due to those having the matter in charge.

And now, Oregon having done so well and gone so far in the right direction, let the march in this noblest of all works, that of relieving and lifting the veil from a clouded mind, be continued with a true step and purposeful effort on the part of all to get the greatest possible returns from the investment. To do this it must be the duty of every right minded person to urge that in the organization it shall be so moulded and established that it shall start with a high standard both in a medical and executive sense, and be fully abreast of the present methods both in this country and Europe. Let the trustees be carefully chosen because of their high character and independence from political or pecuniary influence. Let them be few in number, so as not to be unwieldy, and so, slow of united action. Let them represent the state in all the concerns of the hospital, and be responsible for its proper equipment, organization and conduct. Let them appoint its officers and approve of its employes, and let these officers be responsible to the trustees, who should see to it that none but those of the largest experience, attainments and character be put in place, and when in place that no agitation as to tenure of office or necessity for political influence, or legislative lobbying, shall be allowed to divert them from their proper hospital work, which, to be well done, must not only have a full staff of medical officers; but these officers should have charge of all the concerns of the hospital, as whatever bears upon it as a hospital must also bear upon it as a means of cure, and who can administer the means of cure so well as the physician?

This briefly-sketched plan of organization seems a logical one, and better calculated to secure best and most economical results than one suggested to the writer of having the officers of the hospital appointed by the legislature, a plan sure to lead to disaster; for how can a man be held responsible, and kept to duty when those who appointed him are no longer in session, but scattered over the state, and he is placed in a position to be looking forward to another, a similar body, to whose favor he must look for reappointment? Would it not be putting before him a temptation to leave his work at times for political efforts or lobbying, which would demoralize, not him alone, but the working of the hospital? and not only else or retard the recovery of the patients, but surely prevent economical administration? And this brings me to the subject of administrative frugality. With the low rates for food which prevail in this section, I venture a prediction that the weekly per capita cost need not exceed $4 per week, and this saving over the present sum paid per week, or $5, would represent an interest of 10 per cent. on the whole cost of the hospital equipped for occupancy by 300 patients, or 33 per cent. with 400, which is its capacity. The expense of maintenance of so many is very great, and no step should be taken that will increase this, but every administrative means adopted to lessen unnecessary cost, at the same time demanding the most efficient service and sparing nothing which will restore to usefulness the patient. As to the methods of cure, these rest with the medical officers, but only such service should be allowed as will answer an advanced devoted study of the subject in hand. From the time when Pinel struck the irons from his patients, and brought them out of their cells to daylight and medical treatment, there has been but one tendency in the study of the insane, and that has been in the direction of individualizing each case. The patient is more and more considered, not as one of a group or class, but as an individual, having dimensions and qualities of mind, to be measured and moulded as if still a mind, however awry the manifestations may be. To thus study and work for one who, a sufferer in the sight of others, is more often than is supposed, a conscious sufferer, seems to me to be one of the highest services in which man can engage, and each one has a vital interest in this work, for who shall say that he may not some day come to the door of the hospital for himself or some one near to him? So that it comes to be of personal interest to all, that the state in taking full supervision of its dependents, do so in the best and wisest manner, leaving old ways and methods tried and found faulty, and taking in the beginning an advanced standard of care and treatment in which the only personal interest considered shall be those of the patients. Oregon is now in a position to set an example to some other states, and having thus far done so well in the building, will not the sober second thought of the people lead them to see to it that what has been provided shall be properly started and used, and no threads of the fabric be left to be picked up or woven in?

I am sir, Yours, very truly. M.

Eastern Freight Situation.

NEW YORK, July 15.—There is no material change in clipper freight market, various causes heretofore noted, tending to keep freight offerings on a moderate scale and thereby causing delay to ships in berth. The Palmyra is still waiting for a lot of railroad iron, while the St. Francis to follow is taking such general cargo as can be secured. The Triumphant has nearly her full complement of iron on board, and will finish loading in full next week. Rates remain as before, although there is some weakness noticeable.

Isthmus freights remain very quiet so far as California trade is concerned, but there is more active demand for room for China, by reason of Egyptian complications and threatened destruction of the Suez canal.

Freights at Philadelphia are moderately active, chiefly for weight. The Florida is doing fairly.

MADRID, July 15.—It is semi-officially stated Spain is greatly preoccupied on the subject of the Suez Canal.

THE WAR IN EGYPT.

A Military Government Established in Alexandria.

THE CITY RAPIDLY BECOMING A MASS OF RUINS.

American Marines Lend Their Assistance in the Efforts to Check Flames—Troops Being Forwarded to the Seat of War.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

ALEXANDRIA, July 15.—American marines were the first to land and help restore order. The Germans followed. Both landed without any political instructions from their respective governments. All vessels in the harbor, except those of Austria and Greece, landed men. A famine is apprehended, also an epidemic on account of unburied dead. The offices of the Ottoman bank and Credit Lyonnaise escaped destruction. Arabi Pasha appropriated £25,000 from the custom house before leaving.

According to accounts of persons who remained in the city, bands of murderers during and after bombardment found their way into almost every house, plundering and burning. Scarcely a European dwelling was spared. It appears that large stores of petroleum sent to Alexandria the week before the bombardment was specially used to set fire to the town. Incendiaries state they received instruction to set fire to houses.

ALEXANDRIA, July 15, 10 P. M.—A second visit to this town shows that many houses which were intact yesterday are to-day in ashes; among them the British consulate. Eye witnesses relate that soldiers and others, after plundering houses, heaped up bedding saturated with petroleum and then set the pile on fire. To-day there were no fresh fires, but ruins are tumbling and encumbering streets. Alexandria is still like a city of dead, although a few more Greeks and Maltese are visible on the streets. Americans, Germans, Russians and Greeks who disembarked from their respective ships of war, act as police in different districts while British occupy forts and bastions and are stationed at the gates. French and Italians have thus far refused to land. A sister of the khedive's wife died from premature birth during the bombardment.

LONDON, July 15.—It is stated the duke of Connaught will take command of the brigade of guards in Egypt. The household cavalry do not take heavy kits for active service.

The Times says whatever conclusions the khedive may form in regard to his duty in this great crisis, will be treated with respect, but we hope no disturbance of opinion will definitely separate him from those with whom he has been long associated.

The Daily News believes there is a growing feeling among the powers that the time for Turkish intervention has passed and that the work will be done sufficiently by English and French occupation. Within the past two days France has shown an increasing disposition to undertake joint occupation if invited to do so by the powers.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 16.—It is now stated that the conference will meet to-day and recommend the porte to intervene in Egypt.

It is reported a number of Arabian sheiks have promised to support Arabi Pasha.

DUBLIN, July 15.—Troops are held in readiness to start for Egypt.

ALEXANDRIA, July 16.—The bombardment on Tuesday almost exterminated the Egyptian corps of artillerymen, which was the best branch of the army.

OFF ALEXANDRIA, July 15—3 P. M.—There have been three heavy explosions on shore since noon.

Reported Fight with Arabi.

ALEXANDRIA, July 16—10 A. M.—It is reported Arabi Pasha is awaiting reinforcements from Cairo. Firing was heard outside the town during the night. All available marines and sailors were sent to the front last evening in expectation that Arabi Pasha would attempt to enter the city. The report that Arabi Pasha was marching upon Alexandria caused Admiral Seymour, who did not credit the report, to take precautions. The night passed quietly, yet there was a rumor of fighting occurring at three this morning outside the gates. Orders were given to send all marauders to headquarters with written statements of their cases, to be flogged. Incendiaries continue to be shot. Five rebel soldiers captured by marines have been handed over to the khedive, and will be shot by loyal Egyptian troops. The khedive has dismissed Arabi Pasha from the ministry of war. Fire continues and the aspect of the town is indescribable. It reminds spectators of Pompeii. Whole families of Christians have disappeared, and it is believed they were thrown into the flames.

A Battle Imminent.

LONDON, July 16.—A correspondent telegraphs from Alexandria, July 16, at 8 P. M.: An engagement is imminent between English and troops of Arabi Pasha. I have visited all hospitals and cannot speak too highly of the devotion displayed by the sisters of charity. While some inmates of hospitals, including both sisters of charity and patients, were being escorted by German marines to the beach, they were challenged by the English sentries. As they were unable to give the pass word the English fired. Germans returned the fire, but happily no one was hurt. English sailors to-day flogged ten Arabs guilty of arson, rape and pillage. Five men were publicly shot, four for murder and one as a spy. Hundreds of persons are houseless and starving.

The Ruined City.

LONDON, July 15.—The Times says: Thirteen hundred Christian refugees were saved in the Coptic church during the massacres. Fires in town were undoubtedly directly instigated by the principal supporters of Arabi Pasha, if not by himself. After looting commenced soldiers attacked the original plunderers and robbed them of their prey. Arabi Pasha during the engagement was at Fort Napoleon, which neither fired nor received a shot. After the firing had ceased he rode through town accompanied by Mahommed Lami and other ministers. Subsequently part of the soldiers deliberately set fire to the French consulate. Another party proceeded in the same systematic manner and set fire to the other side of the great square. The whole district is so ruined that even street openings are indistinguishable.

A Military Government Instituted.

A telegram from Port Said, says: The Egyptian minister of war has issued a circular announcing a military government has been instituted, and all revenues will be embargoed for military purposes. British ships are at the entrance to Suez Canal, ready to enter at a moment's notice from home. Advices from Cairo state a sanguinary revolution prevails there despite endeavors of authorities to maintain order. The German consul is preparing to leave with his countrymen. The Italian consul advises his countrymen to go to Ismailia.

Alexandria Well Guarded.

All available marines and sailors with gatling and Nordenfeldt guns are now ashore. They have taken fourteen days' provisions with them. Four hundred men under Lord Charles Beresford act as police. Arabi Pasha is believed to be encamped within twenty miles of Alexandria with a reduced and disaffected army. No Arab soldier in Alexandria is allowed to carry arms. Four who refused to give them up were shot. Altogether Alexandria presents such a spectacle as is seldom witnessed in history. Under the most favorable circumstances twenty years cannot restore it to its former state.

The Fire Checked.

LONDON, July 15.—Admiral Seymour telegraphed at 11 o'clock last night, the fire in Alexandria was not spreading and nearly all looting had stopped. A force of Germans had landed to protect the hospital and a party of Americans to establish the consulate. The iron-clad Minotaur has arrived.

Marines Hold the City.

Marines of the Minotaur have landed. American marines occupy the great square with headquarters in St. Marks building. Captain Fisher of the Inflexible commands the forces landed, and all gatling guns are ordered ashore.

English Consulate Unburned.

ALEXANDRIA, July 15.—The English consulate and quarter containing great grain and cotton stores were not burned. No telegraphic communication with the interior has yet been obtained.

An Urgent Request.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 15.—Dragomans of six powers to-day invited the Porte to send troops to Egypt.

Business Reviving.

ALEXANDRIA, July 15—6 P. M.—It is now possible to walk the streets without an escort. Cafes and shops are reopening, and confidence is generally revived.

Admiral Seymour telegraphs at 1:20 this morning: "I am organizing a police force as fast as possible, and have occupied the gates and two forts."

The Khedive's Courage.

LONDON, July 16.—A correspondent at Alexandria telegraphs the khedive's coolness and courage never left him during the crisis. Soldiers have arrested further progress of the flames in the harem palace. Diplomatists are trying to establish with the khedive semblance of a ministry. People cannot understand why Americans, who can only muster a handful of marines, are invited to land men. Officers on shore have sent word to ships that 100 refugees are clamoring for food. Biscuit is being sent them.

France's Position on the Egyptian War.

NEW YORK, July 16.—A Herald's special from Paris says: The position of the French government on the Egyptian question is imperfectly understood. M. De Freycinet did the wisest thing that a prudent minister could do under the circumstances. He went into the conference with a determination to avoid isolated or joint action with England, unless authorized by its decision, and then only with the sanction of the chamber. He thus avoided all danger of plunging France into a war of which she might have been made the scapegoat of Germany, while at the same time he prepared for eventualities by putting the navy on a war footing. His declining to act with England and in the operations against Alexandria, can there ore in no sense be construed as an admission of weakness or timidity. He was pledged to the chamber not to engage the country in war without consulting it and was equally pledged to submit to decisions of the conference. The English government was under no such obligation to parliament, and in seizing upon the pretext of the arming of the forts in Alexandria as a motive for hostilities, it acted under pressure of the danger which menaced the Suez canal and which rendered immediate action imperative to England. The safety of the canal was a question of much more importance than the consideration how the action might be construed by the conference. Her boldness has been justified by the result, none of the powers having felt themselves called upon to protest against it.

Terms of Turkish Intervention.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 15.—The conditions of Turkish intervention in Egyptian affairs are understood to be as follows: Occupation of Egypt to be limited to three months, at the expiration of which the khedive can demand prolongation, the cost to be defrayed by Egypt. No European commissioners are to accompany the Turkish troops. It is believed the Porte will refuse to despatch an expedition. The secretary of the British legation visited the Porte Saturday for the first time since the bombardment. He was very cordially received. An identical note was presented by a dragoman of the powers to the Porte and requested prompt reply.

Conference Discussed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 15.—The conference to-day discussed the terms of a note to be addressed to the porte demanding dispatch of Turkish troops to Egypt.

All Quiet at Cairo.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 16.—The porte requested ambassadors to attend the conference to-night, the sultan presiding. The German agent at Cairo telegraphed on the 13th inst. that the city was quiet and he believed Arabi Pasha was organizing resistance near Alexandria.

Summary Proceedings.

SUEZ, July 16.—The commander of the Iris sent a peremptory message ordering Egyptian men-of-war not to leave Suez until he has received instructions. The order was issued because the Egyptian commander intended to take his vessels through the canal. Captains are no longer cautioned before entering the canal, but all vessels are thoroughly searched before proceeding.

Parliamentary Proceedings.

LONDON, July 15.—In commons Dilke, under foreign secretary, read a telegram stating that American marines were assisting in the patrolling of Alexandria.

Chamberlain, president of the board of trade, confirmed the rumor that John Bright had resigned the chancellorship of the duchy of Lancaster.

Sir Charles Dilke said the government had no information as to Arabi Pasha's position.

In the house of commons this afternoon, Sir Charles Dilke, in replying to a question as to whether steps would be taken to intercept Arabi Pasha on the land, said: "Our proceedings relate to Alexandria. The other matter is for the powers to take action upon." A thousand more marines have been ordered from Malta to Alexandria.

Bright's Resignation.

Bright's resignation was communicated to the queen to-day.

The Pall Mall Gazette says Bright's resignation is not likely to be followed by that of any of his colleagues.

Parnell Going to Switzerland.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Herald's London: Parnell to-night announced his intention to go to the continent for some months and stay among the Swiss mountains, after passage of the arrears bill, for the benefit of his health.

A Canadian Wins.

In the rifle contest at Wimbledon Lieut. Mitchell, of Canada, won the prince of Wales prize with a score of 85.

General Foreign Notes.

LONDON, July 15.—A woman has been shot at Ballon, county Mayo, for taking a farm from which the former tenant had been evicted. She is in a serious condition.

The American men-of-war Portsmouth and Saratoga passed Gibraltar to-day for Genoa.

THE STATE'S INSANE.

Within a few weeks the state insane asylum, at Salem, ordered to be built by the legislature at its last session, will be completed. The work has been done economically and well. We present to-day a communication written, by request from Dr. C. H. May, distinguished in connection with treatment of the insane in Massachusetts, who, viewing the new building and its site from a professional standpoint, praises them highly. The grounds and the views from them, he says, afford the cheerfulness and variety so desirable and necessary and are spacious and pleasant. The building is well aired and lighted, and well adapted to the purposes of asylum and care. While not expensive it is well arranged and comfortable, and while not elaborate or ornamental, pleasing and homelike.

The question of removal of the state patients from the Hawthorne asylum, East Portland, to this new building will come before the legislature soon to meet, and is one of the most important which it will have to consider. Removal is important, because it involves a complete change in our plan of care and treatment of insanity, and the organization of a new system. For many years the state insane patients have been cared for in the private establishment of the late Dr. J. C. Hawthorne, at East Portland; he supplying everything needful, including the attention of physicians, and receiving a stated sum per week for each patient. This plan, so universally condemned and so wrong in theory, has in the case in point served well. At all times faithful and devoted to his trust, at all times the true and sympathetic friend of his unfortunate fellow beings, Dr. Hawthorne to the hour of his death cared for the insane of Oregon with the spirit and kindness of a father.

The legislature, at its last session extended its contract with Dr. Hawthorne, for a period of two or four years, at pleasure. That is, terms were drawn for four years, the state reserving the right to terminate the contract at the end of two years. This was done in prospect of the completion of the building at Salem, and with the purpose of referring the matter of removal to the legislature soon to meet. The building is, or soon will be, ready, and the legislature must either organize a government and service for it, or allow the contract with the Hawthorne establishment, now in the hands of the administration of Dr. Hawthorne's estate, to run through the contingent term. For many reasons it would seem the part of good policy for the state to take directly into its own hands the care of the insane. The present holders of the unexpired contract cannot hope for another term, and this consciousness would, in the nature of things, remove the stimulus to action and improvement so important in the treatment of insane patients. And this we say without purpose to discredit the persons who now conduct the asylum, and whose devotion and efficiency we are glad to commend. Another consideration is on the score of economy. The charges of finishing the new building, and of removing the patients would perhaps aggregate some thousands of dollars, but to postpone removal would but delay the expense two years; while the difference between the contract cost of keeping the patients and the cost of directly maintaining them in the new establishment would go far to compensate the immediate outlay. It is estimated that the state can in the direct care of the patients, save at least seventy-five thousand dollars in the next two years, but if the saving were but half of this estimate, it would cover the cost of removal. Viewed merely as a business matter, removal this fall appears the part of wisdom, while, as the thing must be done in the end, there is no good argument for delay.

The government and service of the new asylum are considerations of the highest importance. The first, from whence the latter must proceed, must, of course, be by means of a board of commissioners. In other states commissioners are not paid, and serve by virtue of official position or by appointment. The latter plan has been found the more satisfactory, involving fewer changes, while the appointed commissioners are not so apt to be under the influence of political complications in the matter of appointments as are state officials. To quote from Dr. May's letter, "Let the trustees be carefully chosen because of their high character and independence from political or pecuniary influence; let them be few in number, so as not to be unwieldy, and so, slow of action." The precept is one which we shall do well to remember and heed. Right now, when the start is made, there should be an example of non-political organization and management which shall serve forever as a precedent. The care of the insane and the affairs and management of the asylum should forever be sacred from the meddling hand of the politician. Appointments to the asylum service should not come through favor of officials or as reward for party or personal service. Now is the time for an expression of public sentiment, which on this subject cannot but be right, as to the conduct of the new establishment. Any man who attempts to secure place in it by the arts of the politician should be made to understand how hateful are his efforts. From superintendent down to the poorest servant fitness and character should be the tests of appointment, and there should be no exception to the rule.

UNITED STATES SENATOR.

"Why has not THE OREGONIAN more to say about the election of United States senator?" This inquiry is presented in a note printed in another place. Other questions are asked by the same writer, evidently with a view of drawing out an answer through these columns. We can state in small space all we have to say upon these inquiries, at the present stage of the subject.

THE OREGONIAN, then, may say that, while it is by no means indifferent to the senatorial election, still it does not regard the subject as one which takes the precedence over all others in point of interest and importance. A good many seem to suppose that a newspaper exists chiefly to discuss politics and to talk about elections; and further still, that the fulfillment of its highest ambition, and even its success in business, depend on such incidents as the success of a friend or the defeat of an enemy in his aspirations for the United States senate. But, in fact, such incidents are of no more concern to the conductors of this journal than to citizens in any other business. For itself, THE OREGONIAN may say plainly that it has no use for a senator. No senator could render it any service, and it is beyond the power of any senator to do it ill. Two reasons, therefore, exist why it is not having more to say about the election of senator. One is that the subject does not strike it as a matter of overwhelming importance, and the other is that the election is not in the hands of the people, to whom a newspaper might appeal, but in those of members of the legislature, with whom, as a rule, other arguments than those which are presented by newspapers may be expected to prevail.

Of course THE OREGONIAN is aware that partisans of J. H. Mitchell are eager to elect him. There is a trained band of placemen and place hunters who have all their hopes and expectations staked upon it. They think of nothing else, have thought of nothing else from year to year since his former term closed and their effort to re-elect him ended in failure and disappointment. The people, on that occasion elected a democratic legislature rather than afford him a possible chance of returning him to the senate. This year he was prudently kept in the background, and the republicans were successful. Had he been in the state, taking an active part in the contest, it is beyond doubt that the legislature would have been as strongly democratic as it actually is republican. It has been shown over and over that the republicans of Oregon will not follow his leadership, nor elect a legislature when it is apparent to them that the result would be construed as a declaration in his favor.

The legislature is now republican. It is republican this time only because the character of the nominations in many places was taken as an assurance that Mitchell would not be elected. Now that a republican majority is secured, it will elect the man as a representative of the republican sentiment of the state, whom a sufficient number of members can agree upon. We do not suppose it will be Mitchell. While we say this we do not doubt that there will be a considerable number of members who would be glad, and some who would be anxious to elect him. But it may be supposed that there are a good many republican members who will have some solicitude for the future welfare of their party, which will guide their action in this matter. Now THE OREGONIAN has only this to say, namely, that there is no future for the republican party of this state under the leadership of J. H. Mitchell. His election would make an independent party, and keep up a continual broil in our politics. The republicans of Oregon are not going to tolerate boss leadership, spoils politics and the tyranny of the machine system. If, with this knowledge, the republicans of the legislature think fit to elect Mitchell; if they, as republicans, are willing to load upon their party the consequences of the act; if they are disposed to stake the future of their party upon the issue, then certainly THE OREGONIAN, as an independent journal, seeking nothing through party or from party, can stand it quite as well, and it doubts not something better in the long run than they can. At the same time, while it says this about Mitchell and the consequences that would follow his election, it has no candidate, and will have none, and no possible result of the election could be to it a source either of exultation or disappointment. The only suggestion it has to offer the republicans is that they so use their present opportunity to elect a senator that they may have it in their power to elect another two years hence, and to keep the state then and thereafter in the republican line.

ESTIMATES OF POPULATION.

A circular prepared by E. B. Elliott, statistician of the treasury department, contains some interesting predictions in regard to the population of the United States at future censuses, up to and including the year 1910. He estimates the population in 1890 at 64,476,000, in 1900 at 81,529,000, and in 1910 at 101,310,000. In former years experts have made predictions in regard to our population, which time has shown to be more or less accurate. After the third census, Elkanah Watson made some predictions of the succeeding censuses up to and including that of 1900. Some of his early predictions were remarkably accurate. For example: His figures were but 8088 below the census of 1820, but 82,375 below that of 1830, 47,073 above that of 1840, 6566 above that of 1850 and 310,503 above that of 1860. At the subsequent censuses of 1870 and 1880 he was more out of the way, in the former being 3,770,061 above the actual census, and in the latter 6,294,486 above. After the seventh census, DeBow made predictions in regard to the remaining censuses of the century, and his estimate for 1870 was 4,255,355, and in 1880 8,015,226 in excess of the real figures. The rules which govern their estimates made no calculation of the effects of the great civil war between 1860 and 1870, and hence the large discrepancy between their predictions and the actual figures in 1870 and 1880. Comparing all the predictions of which we have any record at hand, they stand as follows:

Watson	77,266,989	100,355,985
DeBow	79,036,050	100,337,408
Walker		75,000,000
Elliott	64,476,000	81,529,000

Elliott has the advantage of the others named in that his prediction, or estimate, is made with the figures of 1880 before him, whereas General Walker's was made in 1873, DeBow's after 1860 and Watson's before 1820.

The citadel of Cairo, which is now being strengthened and furnished with stores for a garrison, in expectation of England's attack, stands on a steep, rocky bluff above the city. It was the favorite residence of the famous Egyptian dictator of the last generation, Mehemet Ali, who strongly fortified it and kept a number of heavy cannon pointed from its walls at the city below to overawe the disaffection which his iron rule inevitably produced. The walls are still in tolerable repair, and might give some trouble to a force unprovided with heavy siege artillery.

The success achieved by the prohibitionists of Iowa is stimulating their brethren in other states. Already they are agitating in several, notably Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin and Kansas. In Michigan and Kansas they are already in the field with candidates for public office who are pledged to prohibition. In the former state they will have a full state and congressional ticket, and in the latter they have already nominated four candidates for congressmen at large.

It would seem that a strong body of English opinion opposes the attack on Egypt. Bright's condemnation is delivered with his usual directness and vigor. The course of the ministry appears to be alienating a considerable section of their party. It is maintained that England's whole duty was summed up in protection of the Suez canal, and that this should have been done without destruction of Alexandria, which is quite a long distance from it.

Ex-Governor Davis, of Texas, chairman of the republican committee of the state, has issued an address to his fellow citizens and fellow republicans, in which he expresses his regret that the republicans of the north have done so little to nationalize the party and strengthen it in the south, and urges the republicans of Texas to unite with the independent party in a movement for the overthrow of bourbon rule.

The word, "prosecution," as employed in criminal trials, evidently requires a new definition. The managers of the prosecution in the star route cases at Washington are good fellows for the defense. It is being made out that Dorsey, Brady and the rest are models of conscientious and and honest citizenship; but they got away with some millions from the treasury all the same.

MONDAY MORNING, JULY 17, 1882.

Recent Trade Marks Filed.—Trade marks have recently been filed in the office of the secretary of state, as follows: "Vienna Coffee House," by Max Smith of Portland; "Esquimaux Brand," by the Ocean Canning Company of Astoria; "Wilhoit Springs Mineral Water," by the Wilhoit Springs Mineral Water Company of Portland; "Commodores Royal O. K. Cigar," by Marx & Jorgenson of Portland; "J. Hankins' Catarrh Remedy," by J. Hankins of Portland; "Photo Brand" of salmon, by Jos. Hume of Astoria; "Hibernia Stomach Bitters" and whiskies by Braunschweiger & Bumsted of San Francisco; "Capitol Mills Bakers' Extra Flour" and "Capitol Mills High Grade Flour," by the City of Salem company.

Umatilla County Illustrated.—Mr. D. H. Stearns returned Saturday from a month's tour through Umatilla county in the interests of the Evening Telegram. He visited and made sketches of Centerville, Weston, Milton, Pendleton, Pilot Rock, Heppner, Echo City and other towns, and gathered facts for descriptive articles which, together with many illustrations, will be published in about 10 days. Mr. Stearns expresses surprise at the wonderful development of Umatilla county within two years. All crops promise well, he says, notwithstanding the heat.

Drowning.—Yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock Frank Hummel, aged fifteen years, son of George G. Hummel, a gardener living on Grant street between Seventh and East Park, was bathing in the submerged flat above the water works. While paddling on a log he fell, and not being able to swim, sank, and before assistance from companions could reach him, drowned. The water was only six feet deep. An hour later the body was recovered by men with hooks, and was conveyed to the father's residence. Coroner Cooke decided not to hold an inquest.

That Game.—The Telegram nine paralyzed The Oregonian nine yesterday afternoon in that base ball game, the score standing 21 to 4 in favor of the afternoon paper at the half of the fifth inning, with the Telegrams still to go to the bat. If they had finished the score would have stood about 75 to 4. The fielding of the defeated team was as poor as ever witnessed, and their batting worse. The regular Oregonian force want it distinctly understood that it was the force on the Sunday edition that were wiped out.

Verein Eintracht Officers.—At their last meeting the Verein Eintracht elected the following officers: President, John Wagner; vice president, U. Zeltfuchs; secretary, John Leck; financial secretary, Julius Dilge; treasurer, Wm. Lindemann; property man, H. Kessler; librarian, H. Liebig; committee on sick, H. Breiter, G. Salzmann, H. Freise; trustees, John Donnerberg, H. Schneider, C. H. B. Durkhoop; refreshment committee, R. Gerdes, C. Kohler.

Progress Indeed.—Salem is progressing. A young lady writes a letter to The Oregonian containing what she calls "a slander on our beautiful city," and says: "Nor is our city so slow as some people and some newspapers seem to think. We're going to have new woolen mills (notice its mills not mill), new flouring mills (mills with an "s" again), and a new bank with real, live Englishmen in it.

Billy Boone's Burglar.—The person captured in the pantry of Wm. R. Boone's residence early Sunday morning, told the police about himself in the afternoon. He gave his name as Joseph Ludwig, said he was a German and had worked in a logging camp on Puget Sound. He can account for his presence in the larder only on the theory that he was crazy drunk.

Camp Meeting.—A campmeeting will be held in Powell's valley commencing August 3d, with promising results. A cordial invitation is extended to both ministers and people. The meetings will be held in the cedar grove occupied last year and near the old ground.

The Steamers.—The State of California arrived in yesterday morning and left for Portland at 3:15 P. M., arriving here at 10 o'clock. The Oregon crossed out at 12:30 P. M.

Salem, July 15.

To the Editor of The Oregonian:

Why has not The Oregonian more to say about the election of United States senator? It can hardly be ignorant that such an event is soon to take place. Does not The Oregonian know that supporters of J. H. Mitchell are trying to work up a majority for him in the legislature. It certainly does know this, and yet it is silent. Does it propose to acquiesce in his election? Some think so. Yours,

INQUIRER.

The elements held high carnival in the John Day valley during the afternoon of July 4th. It is presumed that Jupiter Pluvius took it into his head to have a little celebration on his own hook. A terrific storm of wind and rain, lasting but a few minutes, passed up the valley about 3 P. M., making it rather disagreeable for picknickers and celebrators. The stables of the G. C. A. S., on the fair grounds at Mt. Vernon, were blown down, as was some of the fence. The horses that were within the stables escaped injury. At Prairie City, according to an eye witness, one could not stand in the gale, so great was its fury. Henry McEntyre's barn, on the Prairie City road, was blown down. By way of variety, several cloud-bursts also occurred during the day. One struck on the head waters of Caraner creek and the resulting stream formed quite a respectable river. The road to Long creek is pretty much ruined. One wagon was washed away and other damage done at Caraner's house; but for the width of the stream at that point, the house would have gone with the rest. The channel cut by the rushing waters is said to be thirty feet wide and eight feet deep. Henry Blackwell was in the storm and says that he thought his time had come, but he escaped serious damage.—Grant County News.

THE FRENCH CELEBRATION.

WHY JULY FOURTEENTH WAS MADE A HOLIDAY.

Our New Young Man Enlightens the Wood Hauler About the Bastile. Its Fall and Other Things.

"I just thought you wouldn't be very busy to-day, and I come to ask whether you wouldn't tell me about this here French jollification, that they had Friday night."

The remark came from the Cornell road wood merchant, who dropped into the editorial rooms about three o'clock yesterday afternoon. The bell boy isn't on duty Sunday, so the man walked in unannounced. In one hand he carried a half-gallon bucket of luscious Royal Ann cherries and in the other, a like measure of Black Republicans. He made an equal apportionment to the several members of the staff, saying he had picked them before sun-up from trees only two years old, and presented them only because he liked us, not that he wanted his name in the paper.

"Can't you come in later?" asked the dramatic reporter, who was preparing a criticism on Hazel Kirke from Mark Thall's colossal scrap book of press notices.

"Suppose you step down to the business office, first-door-to-your-left-at-the-foot-of-the-stairs," rattled off the local editor, "and get a copy of Saturday's paper. It has Capt. Martin's speech; that tells all about the holiday."

"The milkman that lives just the other side of me always gets the Saturday Oregonian," answered the wood hauler, "and lets me have it Sunday. I finished reading it before I came to town. Now, if it ain't too much trouble, I wish some of you'd tell me what the Bastile was and who took it, and where they took it to and what they wanted with it. I never had much schoolin' and—"

Our new young man came in about this time. He had returned from his mission Sunday school class beyond Mt. Tabor, and remarked as he mopped the perspiration from his brow that the cause was better able to suffer than he, and he'd have to be furnished a buggy or give up the work till fall.

"Sit down and wait a few minutes," he said to the questioner, "and I'll tell you all about it." In defiance of the water company's imperative rule positively forbidding the use of water for irrigation purposes, he went to the faucet in the composing room and drank, and drank. And then he'd step down to the sink in the press room where the type is washed and turn the hose on his fevered head. The visitor amused himself eating the commercial editor's apportionment of cherries and shooting the stones through his teeth across the room into a cuspidore. He missed only three out of 108 shots.

Our walking cyclopedia returned and taking a seat at his table, dropped his head in deep thought and after a few minutes began: "For four hundred and twenty years the Bastile stood as a menace against free speech, against free action, against free thought. It was a constant reminder to the populace that they did not breathe free air. Whoever offered the slightest protest against existing laws, or sassed a policeman, or looked cross-eyed at a sheriff, or crooked his finger at a congressman, or played base ball without a permit from the burgomeister, was collared and run in, and was held at the mercy of one supreme, irresponsible dispenser, with whom no argument could be held, to whom no reason could be addressed, from whom no hearing could be obtained, and, lastly, from whom there was no appeal; and that on any caprice or change of policy, the prisoner might at any moment be subjected to the most horrible condition of the most wretched inmate of that house of woe; and if it were determined to torture, or to kill, or to immure in oblivion and report him as being dead, no human being would ever be the wiser till the end of time as to what had been his real fate. Whenever any of these fellows on whose heads had been poured the divine petroleum of authority got mad at a man—even if it were for so small an offense as "sicking" a dog on a rooster in the royal hen-yard—they fixed him plenty by putting in the cooler. The wretched inhabitant of these dungeons, deprived of air and light, buried alive in a damp and infected atmosphere, in the midst of loathesome mud, the breeding place of toads and noisome reptiles, surrounded by spiders and rats, could not long support his miserable existence amid such an accumulation of horrors. The capture and destruction of the Bastile by the aroused populace was a comparatively insignificant act, but its effect in promoting the cause of personal liberty cannot be measured. The noise of the first stone falling from the main tower was heard around the globe."

Our new young man stopped to take breath, the visitor remarking: "Mister, you talk like a book. I'd give everything I've got in the world if I had your education."

There was a suppressed laugh from the quintette of pencil-pushers, and while the wood-hauler was looking around to ascertain the cause, our new young man slipped into the drawer from his lap vol. II. New Am. Ency., ARA-BEA. The visitor had not noticed that the young man with his head bowed in thought had been reading from pp. 717-720.

"Oh, that's nothing," answered the modest journalist. "We've got to know all about these little historic events before we can get a job on a paper."

"Can you tell me who ruled the roost?" asked the visitor.

"Well, the prison was built by Charles the Fifth in 1369 to protect his palace against the incursions of the Burgundians. All his successors built it bigger and stronger."

"What sort of people did they lock up?"

"Everybody that they wanted to, from the heir to the throne down to a ward politician. The monarch and his crowd would imprison anybody that they did not like, whether he was guilty of anything, or suspected, or known to be innocent. For instance, some man of brains and good blood and leadership was organizing an independent movement, and they were afraid to kill him or chuck him in a dungeon, they'd put him in one of the best rooms, and give the finest the market afforded; but they'd keep him just the same. If it were some obscure person, he'd get one of the lower rooms, and was cut off from all communication with the outside world as completely as if he was in a vault at Lone Fir. When Louis the Eleventh came to the throne, he had a lot of smooth stone dungeons built in the sub-basement, just the size of a coffin, so that a man could not turn round after he was put in."

"Didn't the men never have a trial?" asked the woodhauler.

"Have a trial! Heavens, man, they didn't even have a preliminary examination. Whenever the king or any of his crowd got pizened on a man, they snatched him baldheaded and rushed him in like a house on fire, and I tell you the man stayed there. As far as the outside world was concerned, he was as dead as if the dirt had already been piled on him."

"Couldn't his friends get a habis corpis or writ of replevy or something?"

"No. The doctrine that a man cannot be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law hadn't come in style then."

"Why didn't they hold meetings and pass resolutions?"

"They didn't do such things in those days. No conventions, no mass meetings, no sand lot, no torchlight processions, no banners. 'Wait till you hear from Linn,' 'white husbands, or none,' 'we'll vote as we shot,' and all such stuff, and the first man that would have written 'The people of France, in convention assembled, point with pride, etc., would have got a pair of clean stockings and a free ride, feet foremost, in a glass wagon.'"

"Why didn't the newspapers take up the fight then?"

"I guess you told the truth when you said you had no schooling. Why, man, types were not invented till nearly a hundred years after the Bastile was built. When they did get newspapers, 300 years afterward, they'd hang an editor for printing anything against the king quicker'n Three'd get water on a fire half a block away. Even to this day, and France is a republic, they have a lot of old stiffs who dictate what shall and what shall not be published. Same in Germany, same in Russia. England imported a lot of good talent from the United States, and Victoria has confidence in them, and they see she's doing the square thing, and they support her."

"You haint told me who pulled the Bastile down," suggested the inquirer.

"That's so. Things had been getting too hot for the people to stand it any longer. There was a tremendous mass meeting on the 14th of July, 1789, about 60,000 people being present. That was before Anna Dickenson went on the stage, and before The Oregonian was founded. The New York Herald had a correspondent in Paris at the time, and he telegraphed the following account: The crowd assembled in the neighborhood of the prison with pickaxes, clubs, battering rams, saws, and firearms. It was the middle of July, with the thermometer 108 in the shade. Most of the gendarmes had gone to the coast for the season, and the police had taken their girls to the picnic, twelve miles down the Seine. A messenger was dispatched horseback to the scene of festivities and arrived just as the musicians had announced the waltz for a prize ring. Of course that broke the dance up, and there was a grand rush for the steamboat. But she had two barges in tow and didn't arrive at the dock until the prison was a mass of ruins. While the outraged populace were waiting, not knowing what to do, some tall, muscular man mounted a dry goods box and shouted 'To the Bastile!' and away they went. One of the foremen yelled 'Whoop it up, boys, in the other alley!' and one-third of the crowd ran round the corner. Another very heavy man with a stentorian voice climbed a beer keg, and waving his plug hat shouted, 'I propose three rousing cheers for ——.' The crowd began cheering before he could get the last word out, and pell mell they rushed to the prison. In less than twenty minutes every prisoner was released, and before dark so great was the destruction that not one stone lay on another."

"Was any of the mob ever put through for it?" asked the searcher for knowledge.

"No. A large number were indicted, but the officers wanted to be re-elected, and they just let the thing die out."

"Have they ever tried to build the prison again?" was the next inquiry.

"No, they have jails and penitentiaries now, regulated just like those in this country, but no more Bastiles. The French people vote, and have about the same liberties as we Americans, but they do not exercise enough vigilance over their freedom. For instance, there's one district, Pennsyl Vanie, a very rich section with great coal mines, and rolling mills, and woolen factories, and fine farms, and a splendid climate. It is specially favored because the national government won't let anybody else compete with the rich men who manufacture iron and wool, and they are getting richer and richer every day. The district is prosperous and ought to be contented. But there's a usurper named Cameron who wants to be made Prince of Pennsyl Vanie and surprising as it may seem, a good many people are willing to put him in that office. His support comes from a crowd of men who won't work and want the government to give them offices that pay large salaries, and from the friends of these idlers; from saloon keepers who sell whiskey and beer to these small friends; from a crowd who don't care whether school keeps or not, so they get some of this money, however small, from the government."

"Well, they have what is known as a party machine and their fellows run the machine, and they threaten to ostracise all good men who refuse to help them run the machine. But there's a man named Stewart lately uprisen who is trying his best to break Cameron right in two."

"Well, I'm mighty glad I'm in the United States," said the visitor, "where a man is free to vote the way he wants to."

"Yes," answered his informer, "and the tussel between Cameron and Stewart comes off in November. Come around Christmas and I'll tell you how it turned out."

THE NEW PASTOR.

Rev. Mr Lee, called by the recently organized Calvary Presbyterian church, reached Portland yesterday. On Thursday evening he conducted the prayer meeting, and at its close received, with his wife, the hearty greetings of his waiting congregation.

Mr. Lee is a young man, scarcely thirty years of age, and is just from college, although he has done active Christian work for several years. He has a dignified bearing and a ministerial presence, but is refreshingly cordial and hearty, and commends himself at once to confidence and love. He has a rich voice showing evidence of careful culture added to great natural ability. As a reader he is seldom equaled. His admirable emphasis of Bible sentences shows a deep knowledge of the subject, and conveys new ideas to the hearers. He is a bright and shining light to the usual list of hymn readers. He is dramatic without effort, effective because earnest, earnest because earnestness is inwrought as a part of his being. He speaks from notes, without manuscript, but his divisions and subdivisions are accurately given, and made so plain that even the children can understand them. On Sunday morning he spoke of interesting both old and young, the central idea being Unity. This word is by no means interchangeable with unit and uniformity. A unit is one thing alone, having no relation, physical or corporative, to any other thing. Uniformity indicates a sameness which is incompatible with beauty or effectiveness, like a row of houses of one pattern. There is, for example, no uniformity between the various denominations of christians, but there is unity in the highest degree, all working for the same object under the same Master. There is unity between church and state in so far as general uplifting of the people is concerned, but no uniformity of methods are employed.

These ideas, skillfully elaborated by a master hand, and interspersed with appropriate illustrations, led the eloquent speaker at length to consider the subject nearest his heart; namely, unity between pastor and people in the relations just consummated at Calvary church. He would endeavor to do his part. He would lead the public services, visit from house to house, minister to the sick and sorrowful and in every way give his energies and faculties to the work; but the people must bear a part; they must stand together in every good work, avoid bickerings and striving, preserve unity among themselves and between congregation and pastor.

The subject of his first sermon had occupied his mind since leaving New York, but had not taken definite shape until after his arrival in Portland.

THE EVENING DISCOURSE.

In the evening, to another large audience, Mr. Lee spoke from Dan. 1—8: "But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank," and 6—10: "Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house, and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed and gave thanks as aforetime."

The life of Daniel is one of remarkable purity and loyalty. Daniel and Joseph are the only Old Testament characters against whom no accusation was ever sustained. We first meet Daniel a mere lad of fifteen. He is ushered into all the enchantments, frivolities and damning influences of the heathen courts. He is surrounded on every hand by the most corrupting associations. But even at this susceptible age he knows that if he is loyal to God, God will never forsake him. And after seventy years have passed over his head we find him at eighty-five the same steadfast soul, loyal to his God and revered by all who knew him. Well may we follow his example of loyalty to God.

Two elements make up loyalty: First, prudence; a man to be loyal to his master or country must exercise prudence morning, noon and night. As Solomon, the great preacher says, "The wisdom of the prudent is to understand his way. The prudent man looketh well to his way." Many people, otherwise lovable, lack the God-given quality of prudence. We must guard against hasty words and injudicious acts. Have we not to-day said or done something that shadows our evening serenity? The second element of loyalty is unflinching performance of duty. This, in the highest degree, characterized Daniel. Yes, it got him into trouble, but what does that matter? Many a man at the present day will get into trouble by doing his duty, but what does that matter? We must often suffer for our convictions, but in some way good will come of it.

We have before us three characters: Darius, representing egotism; ministers, representing jealousy, and Daniel, representing trust in God. Darius unwittingly aims a blow at him he most loves. The ministers are determined to pull Daniel down if possible. Daniel never wavered in his trust and when confronted by the lions' den as the only alternative from idolatry, he doubtless remembered the numberless times when God had believed him, giving him favor with several successive kings, and putting his trust where it had always been, determined to face any danger or death itself rather than in any way slight his God. Although we get into trouble by doing our duty let us remember:

1. That we must not try to avoid seeing that duty. Many have determined not to see the lion of duty and so neglected what should have been plain before them. This is as much a sin before God as it would be to meet the lion, duty, and turn deliberately back.

2. Duty is to be performed calmly, quietly, firmly. Some men sound a bugle in the streets. "I'm doing my duty. I give ten thousand a year to charitable purposes." Another hoists a banner and so publishes his deeds. God does not bring people in by force. He does not take them by the collar, nor throw a rope around the neck and drag them into his kingdom. He appeals to the heart, he shows you the dear Jesus and asks you to yield to the influence of his love. This you must do if you would be loyal to him. Some having yielded in some strange way get astray into thickets and by-places. Many people in the west, having confessed Christ in the east, are living careless lives of disloyalty, as if their conduct were unknown to him. But let them not be deceived. God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. God grant that we may be found loyal as long as we live!

ANOTHER VICTORY.

The Stars Visit Oregon City and Again Defeat the Clippers.

Seven or eight hundred people accompanied the Star base-ball club to Oregon City, yesterday, to witness the return match with the Clippers. The game was a close and interesting one. The Oregon City nine, strengthened by the addition of several new men, played well, while the Stars made the number of errors that has heretofore characterized their games on that ground. The enjoyment of spectators was marred by the senseless yelling of a crowd of young fellows whenever the local club put out a man or made a base. The finish of the game was exciting. The Stars had been leading, but in the seventh and eighth innings the Clippers secured four runs, putting them one ahead, with one inning to go. The Stars went to the bat, and one man reached first. The next was put out on a foul, and the third made a good hit, making second base and sending the first man to third. The next striker "flew" out to the left field, and the succeeding one was given first on seven balls. The outlook was bad for the Stars, for Geis was the next striker, and he is reckoned a weak batter; but he put the ball over the center field, bringing in three tallies and reaching third, whence he came home on a passed ball by the catcher. The Clippers were easily retired in their inning, and the Stars had added to their unbroken chain of victories.

NEWS OF SATURDAY.

[From the Sunday Oregonian.]

England's Coercive Policy in Egypt.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Lieut. Commander Gorringe, who spent over eight months in Alexandria preparing to remove the obelisk, has been interviewed by the World He thinks the bombardment a brutal and unjustifiable act, that the British government wanted a pretext for war on the national party of Egypt to get control of the Suez canal. England, he says will have no difficulty in subduing the Egyptian army in a short time after hostilities on land begin, unless the admirals and generals should continue to make such mistakes as have been made by Admiral Seymour. "I cannot conceive," says he, "how it was possible for him to let Arabi Bey and the Egyptian army escape from Alexandria, as he did, that the army could not have escaped from the fortifications without having exposed themselves to the guns of the British fleet in such a way as to insure their own destruction if any attempt was made to destroy them." He says, "It will doubtless take millions of pounds to repair the damages to the fortifications, English quarter and the Levantine Christian section, which is larger than the other two together and composed largely of fine city blocks, and the losses from the conflagration must be tremendous."

"What part do you suppose Arabi Pasha and the soldiers had in doing injury and the atrocities that have followed?"

"Nothing. I think the perpetrators belong to the same class of Levantine Christians and Maltese Englishmen who were foremost of the so-called massacre last month. As he has no army to oppose any movements he makes, Arabi has run no risks in dividing forces. I think he is going with a detachment of troops to the Suez canal with the intention of destroying it, and the other detachment is retreating to Cairo, intending to make a stand there. The British have now lost their worst ... until they have had time to land an army. There is not water enough in the Nile for gunboats to ascend the river to Cairo even at high water. There is not more than five or six feet of water on the bars of the mouth, while the smallest of the English gunboats draws from 10 to 12 feet, so England must depend for future operations entirely on her land forces. Still I think Arabi will not be able to defend Cairo very well against English troops. If Arabi succeeds in making any kind of stand at Cairo, he will have all the better elements of the Egyptian population on his side, but he can arm and equip only about 20,000 men. The national party in Egypt deserves the entire sympathy of all Americans, for its cause is just. The movement is a national or patriotic one, which has its basis in a desire to throw off an oppressive tyranny and to obtain their rights as human beings. I met Arabi frequently and conversed with him on Egyptian politics. He struck me as a man of much force, but not of remarkable capacity. The mainspring of his thoughts and actions seemed to be patriotism of the most lofty type. He never expressed any dislike for Christians, but frequently gave expression to the most intense bitterness against the English. He was keenly alive to the fact that so long as the Suez canal remained open, Egypt could never attain her national position on the line of the shortest route between England and India. To destroy the canal is the evident purpose of his movement eastward, and I am afraid he will accomplish this unless the English can get their vessels into it and hold it against his army."

Archery Tournament.

CHICAGO, July 14—The archery tournament closed with team shoots for national team trophies. Gentlemen's contests for teams of four, 96 arrows each, at 60 yards, seven teams entered. The next best score was by Chicago Northside team, composed of L. O. Blake, J. Wilkinson, Granger Smith and D. P Wilkinson score 1353. For the ladies' team, trophy teams of three, 32 arrows each, 40 yards, four teams contested. The trophy was won by the College Hill team of Cincinnati, composed of Miss Morrison, Mrs. Wild and Mrs. Degolyer, score 376. The second place was won by the Highland Park team, composed of Misses Carver, Street and Dennison, score 250.

WASHINGTON CITY.

The Bills of Garfield's Physicians.

WASHINGTON July 15.—Representative Blackburn yesterday supplemented Senator Vest's attack upon the late President Garfield's physicians by a speech in much the same style on the question of concurring in senate amendment to the deficiency bill appropriating $35,000 for the payment of these physicians. Mr Blackburn's speech had been looked for with interest, because it was expected that when he made it he would devote some attention to the expense of the funeral train to Cleveland for which he held vouchers. Those who expected to see this matter thoroughly ventilated were disappointed as the member from Kentucky made no allusion to it, confining himself to discussing the action of the senate in denouncing the doctors and criticising the service they rendered. He approached the subject of paying the physicians with the statement that he entertained no unkind feeling toward either living or dead. His feelings for the dead were those of respect and of honor, and as far as paying for the service rendered in his illness was concerned, he declared he would at any time during that illness have voted to employ the federal treasury had he thought it was in the power of medical skill to save him but he denied that any extraordinary services had been rendered by the physicians in attendance upon the president. The wound of the president he said was never treated from the day it was delivered until the day of his death by a single doctor, and it took an autopsy to discover the ball, and then it was found only by accident in a washbowl. The wound he said, need not have been mortal to have produced death with such medical treatment as the president had received, and added, the history of medical science never furnished such an instance of blundering as the treatment of this case. He bitterly assailed the greedy crowd of cormorants that had swarmed down upon congress with bills ranging from 75 cents to $25,000. Judge Taylor of Ohio Garfield's successor in congress who is chairman of the select committee on the expenses of the illness and death of the president, reported a bill to the house some months ago providing for their payment replied to Mr Blackburn. He thought the proper thing for congress to do was to relieve the estate of the dead president from these claims. He could state, however, that the members of the Garfield family would never allow payment of physicians to become a matter of litigation. Mr. Springer of Illinois, followed in the line of Blackburn's denunciation of the doctors and with some sarcasm stated as a proof of the extraordinary services they rendered that for seventy days they treated a pus cavity for a gunshot wound, this cavity having been made by their own malpractice in the beginning of the case.

A number of amendments were offered to the amendment to increase, and in some to reduce the amount appropriated, and were all voted down. Finally the house voted against concurring in the amendment embodying the proposition to appropriate money for payment of the expenses, by 73 to 83. This action means that the house will pass its own bill for payment of these expenses.

After the vote on nonconcurrence Judge Taylor introduced and had passed without division, a bill to give Mrs. Garfield $50,000, or one year's salary of the president, less any sums paid him up to the time of his death.

Washington Notes.

WASHINGTON July 15.—It is said that there is an understanding among democrats to prolong the debate on the internal revenue bill in hope of inducing republicans to abandon the bill for this session and go before the country this fall without having reduced taxation. All democratic senators who can talk on the tariff will make speeches on the bill and may carry the debate along for weeks, there being no previous question or any other restriction on debate in the senate.

The following circular is being extensively circulated here by importers: "Seven reasons why the saccharine strength clause of Senator Morton's sugar bill should be stricken out: First, it will largely defeat the object aimed at in abolition of the act of 1875, for while repeal takes off twenty five percent the polariscope clause (for that is what is meant by ascertaining the saccharine strength) increases the duty ¼ to ½ cent per pound on a large quantity of imported sugars. second, that this is its object is proven by the fact that this clause of the section is identical with a bill introduced in the house of representatives at this session of congress by Gibson of Louisiana. third aside from Louisiana no one asks for the polariscope as a method of assessing the duty on sugar that portion of the sugar trade who formerly advocated it have long since abandoned it, and the only plans now proposed by sugar importers and refiners are either a single rate of duty on all raw sugars, or the ad valorem plan. fourth, the proposal to introduce the polariscope would be bitterly opposed by a large proportion of importers and owners, while the entire body of dealers in sugar, including these interests, would welcome the simple repeal of the law of 1875. fifth, the committee on ways and means of the forty fourth, forty fifth, and forty-sixth congresses after repeated and thorough investigation, have declined to recommend the polariscope, and a bill containing this clause, would not be likely to pass the house. sixth the whole question of assessing duties on sugar will be considered and reported on by the tariff commission now in session where the Louisiana interest is represented by the able president of the sugar planters association of that state. seventh what the people of this country want of congress at this time is simply a reduction of the duty on sugar and that is to be had by repeal of the law of 1875, pure and simple without any reference to methods of collection or conflicting interests.

The senate added the following amendment to the naval appropriation bill as received from the house that hereafter the provisions of laws retiring officers of the navy shall apply to all officers on the active list, provided that the admiral and vice admiral shall not be retired before reaching the age of 64 and that the admiral shall not retire on full pay of his grade. The house appropriates in the aggregate $15 351,990 and this amount will be increased about $70 000 by the senate.

Conference committee on the legislative executive and judicial appropriation bill, failed to reach an agreement on the section of the bill which proposed transfer of army records from custody of the surgeon general to that of the adjutant general.

A quorum of republican, greenback and independent representatives on the committee on elections is expected in Washington on Tuesday next.

Captain Payne of Oklahama called upon Secretary Teller yesterday. The secretary told him, as the law regarding intruders in Indian territory remains upon the statute books he will do all in his power to enforce it, and that it would be imprudent for the captain to attempt to settle in the territory himself, and perhaps disastrous to lead others there.

Col. Bliss deems his new evidence in star route cases amply sufficient for the grand jury to have found a presentment upon. It is reported that the jury was thoroughly familiar with the connection between Senator Kellogg and Walsh as shown in the testimony taken before the congressional investigation committee before, and evidence presented them. It is understood that out of twenty three jurors nineteen were opposed to the presentment upon evidence upon general vote.

The secretary of state to-day informed the cabinet that his department had no further news of the situation in Alexandria and Egypt than had already appeared in the newspapers.

Arabi's Assistants.

LONDON, July 14.—A correspondent of the Times says I went ashore to-day. All evidences prove the truth of the report that Egyptian gunners were directed by French and Italian artillerists.

Mr. Bright's Resignation.

LONDON, July 15.—Mr Bright has been absent from the house during all discussions on the Egyptian crisis, and his resignation was generally expected on account of language he has generally held on the subject of war and armed intervention in affairs of other countries. The Daily News states the resignation of Bright is owing to his dissent from the government Egyptian policy by resigning. The News states that Bright has been honorably true to the convictions of his whole life, and he now finds the government committed to a course of action he is unable to approve.

Egyptian War Notes.

Correspondent at Constantinople telegraphs The council of ministers at midnight decided that efforts be made to effect an arrangement of the Egyptian question and that if efforts failed Turkish troops should be sent to Egypt. The porte received a telegram from Cairo stating all was quiet there.

A correspondent on the Invincible sends the following: Off Alexandria, 6 P. M.—All ships have ashore every man that can be spared. Marines were landed, at request of Khedive. Arabi Pasha sent away by railway all women and children in thousands. All able bodied males were ordered to join the army.

Arabi Pasha's Recklessness.

ALEXANDRIA, July 14, 5 P. M.—All Arabs are carrying white handkerchiefs on sticks and showing great anxiety to be friendly. I found General Stone with the khedive. The general confirmed the report that Arabi Pasha had ordered the murder of the khedive, and added, Arabi had ordered sacking of the town before quitting it. Two Arab soldiers have been seized with plunder and beaten for pillaging. Several Arabs have been arrested with a large quantity of loot in their possession. Americans have landed sixty marines under command of Captain Cochran. There are still Egyptian police on duty helping to maintain order. The entrance to Ras-el Tin palace is entirely destroyed, and the court yard and barracks are full of timber and accoutrements. The base of the light house is badly damaged. European municipal officers informed me that Arabi Pasha had ordered firing of the town and soldiers were the first to begin plundering. Desertion from Arabi's army is rife.

A Ruined City

ALEXANDRIA, July 14, 7 P. M.—(On board Invincible) The khedive's arrival has caused lively satisfaction, for the way is now opened out of the deadlock which before prevailed. It is by his request that our marines are on shore patrolling streets and trying to stop the terrible chaos which has existed for three days. Streets upon streets have been burned. Many Christians in hiding have escaped and stories are all of the same kind, murder and robbery. The first intimation that the khedive was alive was given by three officers who came from Ramleh to ask that assistance be sent the khedive whose palace was surrounded by Arab troops who nominally came as his guards. The admiral promised to keep the streets clear, and officers said they would come straight back if not hindered from leaving the palace by troops. In the evening proclamations in Arabic were issued in the name of the khedive ordering soldiers to leave their regiments and go back to their native villages. I accompanied a body of marines and blue jackets who landed from three ships to destroy the guns of Forts Ras-el Tin and Pharos. The forts were in a complete state of ruin. The effect of the explosion of great shells must have been terrible. The strongest walls crumbled, and it is a marvel how Egyptians fought their guns so long. The khedive's palace lying behind the fort is badly knocked about. Near the entrance gate of the fort, whose magazine exploded, we found a sentry dead. The ground was torn up and walls shattered. The whole place was dismantled and several dead gunners lay on the battery close behind. Several huge pits had been dug as graves and into these most of the dead were thrown as they fell. It is estimated that in the forts alone four hundred of Arabi's troops had been killed, and from two hundred to two thousand Christians are said to have been massacred, but there does not appear to be any reliable data. From friendly natives the admiral obtained information that a body of Arabi's troops has gone to Damanhour 15 miles away, where strong works have been erected. All reports concerning Arabi must be received with caution. It may be said all defences of Alexandria are now in our hands. Stone Pasha has been with the khedive from first to last. It was erroneous that he had espoused the party of Arabi and he told Col Long so this morning. Col. Long took his flag ashore.

ALEXANDRIA, June 15.—10:35 P. M.—Sailors now occupy all gates. They have been ordered to disarm all soldiers and shoot loot... The populace is being encouraged to return to their houses. The Penelope has sailed for Ismalia. The fire continues with unabated fury.

Crops in Canada

TORONTO July 15.—The July report of the bureau of industries gives a summary of the condition of grain, hay and fruit crops in the province of Ontario. The area under fall wheat is nearly double the area under spring wheat. Estimates of the crop of fall wheat are 32,000 000 bushels. Oats promise excellent crops. Corn is almost a failure and clover will be short. Timothy will be an average crop and apples promise a large crop while plums and peaches are scarce.

LAWS OF SALMON FISHING.

The Board of Trade Considers the Rumor that the Law is to be Violated—Committee Appointed.

The board of trade met Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock in their rooms President Macleay in the chair. The president stated that the object of the meeting was to consider the reports that fishermen would continue to catch salmon in the Columbia river after the 1st of August.

Mr Whalley who was present stated that the fishermen expected to evade the law by the difficulty which would be found by the prosecuting attorney in enforcing the present statutes.

District Attorney Caples suggested that there was more talk than anything else. "There has as yet been no real violations of the law. Public opinion however, is that these laws are not valid yet no one has attempted their test. This action of the board of trade will tend to mould opinion in the other direction. As it now stands the penalty is so great for a violation of the law as to be very hard to get a grand jury to indict a man, for a trivial offense. The question of boundaries is an important one. The constitution provided that the north boundary of the state of Oregon should be up the middle of the ship channel of the Columbia and also says in cluding jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases shall be concurrent with adjoining states and territories over the whole river. The question now rises 'Does the boundary of a county extend across the river?' This question has never been decided but it is my opinion that in civil and criminal cases the boundary of a county will be considered the same as far as jurisdiction is concerned as is provided by the constitution for the boundary of the state."

Mr Dodd thought that as a body the board of trade should call upon all interested in the packing business to stop on the first of August and not kill the goose that had laid so many golden eggs.

Capt. Ingersoll suggested that the board draw up an address to be sent to all cannery men calling attention to this matter and expressive of the sense of the board of trade in reference to the unlawful catching and canning of salmon in the waters of the Columbia and its tributaries and the determination of the board to vigorously prosecute all violators of the laws in such cases made and provided. The suggestion was put in the form of a motion that a committee of three be appointed to do this and was carried unanimously.

The chair appointed as such committee Messrs Ingersoll, Whalley and Dodd. The board then adjourned.

SATURDAY'S LOCAL NEWS.

[Condensed from The Sunday Oregonian.]

A sketch of Vancouver from the south bank of the Columbia river was made last week by Prof R. C White. He is now engaged in painting the picture for his panorama.

A successful lumber merchant of Petersburg Illinois Mr N K Rankin brother of W B Rankin of this city arrived by the last steamer to look for a location. He will remove here next spring.

Hon. R P Earhart, secretary of state having recently been elected to his second term in that office has just filed his official bond with Hon J N Dolph and Hon D P Thompson of this city as sureties.

The Walla Walla fire engine which fell into the Columbia a few days ago was successfully fished out. A diver went down, and after some trouble succeeded in getting a hawser around it. The machine was then raised to a barge by a strong derrick. The damage was slight.

J A Labonto, the Clarendon burglar was brought up in court Saturday on two charges one of burglary and one of larceny in a dwelling. He waived examination and was held to answer his bail in each case being fixed at $500 which he could not give, so he went to the county jail.

An attempt was made to burglarize Judge Bellinger's residence in East Portland, last Thursday night. The judge was awakened by a noise of a man climbing in the window and jumped out of bed to grapple with the intruder. The latter was too quick in his retreat however.

Marshal Rundell of Chico, left on the steamer for California Saturday night with his prisoner J. L. Keiter who is wanted on a charge of murder at the above named place. His return was delayed by the waiting necessary for the action of Governor Thayer on the requisition issued by the governor of California.

Robert Koldeway, who has been acting as collector for Mr John Fuikman, publisher of the Staats Zeitung was arraigned in Justice Groene's court yesterday, on a charge of feloniously embezzling and converting to his own use the sum of $40 the property of his employer. He was held to answer before the grand jury in the sum of $200.

Among the passengers on the outgoing steamer last night were Mr J. R. Cougill and family of East Portland. They will make a lengthy Eastern trip visiting St Louis Mo. Shelbyville, Ill and Eureka Kansas. The journey is taken for the benefit of Mrs Cougill's health, which is quite feeble. They expect to be absent about six months.

An unknown man was captured in the pantry of Billy Boone's house corner of Third and Salmon streets Sunday morning about 1 o'clock. Boone discovered him and raised an alarm. Officers Hickey and James were near at hand and took in the burglar. He refused to give any name and is unknown to the police. He is supposed to be Boone's bogus Buffalo Bill.

Mr F DeClarke roadmaster on the O. & C R R will resign that position to-morrow, to superintend the construction of bridges on the extension south and Mr J. M. Stout formerly employed as boss track layer on the O. R. & N. R R, will fill the place made vacant by the resignation of Mr DeClarke. Mr DeClarke has been employed by the O & C Co a number of years, and is one of the best railroad men in the country, east or west.

Chris Eppsun the German who came to St. Vincent's hospital from Klickitat county a few days ago with a broken leg has had the injured member amputated by the surgeons who attend him. Eppsun's horse fell with him on Klickitat prairie and he had to travel over forty miles in an open wagon before he could obtain even the slightest surgical assistance. After his arrival at St Vincent's his leg continued to grow worse, and it was deemed necessary to remove it to save his life. The operation was performed by Drs R. G. Rex and C. H. Jasper.

ALBANY'S GREAT DAY.

The city authorities of Albany have just completed one of the handsomest halls for engine purposes to be found in the state outside of Portland. It is 25x58 two stories and is tastefully furnished throughout. The contractors Messrs Byrs & Hochstedler have done thorough and satisfactory work. On Tuesday July 18 the hall will be formally turned over the fire company with appropriate ceremony. A grand parade of all fire companies present will take place at 1 o'clock P. M. to be followed with contests of speed and efficiency, and various other exercises. As the O & C R. R Co have generously agreed to furnish all who wish to attend the dedication on that day with tickets over their lines at usual excursion rates, it will be a fine opportunity for fire companies in all portions of our state to visit the beautiful city of Albany.
